Module 4 Explanation

I modeled the foundation of my navigation bar, probably mostly from the alumni I interviewed. I requested information from several Alumni, however, Hollyce was the only one that got back to me and fortunately, I really like the organization of her site. Being an Experience Architecture major, I will hopefully have a lot of different areas of work to showcase. I think a tab for Writing would be usual as I will have to take many writing courses as a part of my major, but also I think it would be cool to show different styles such as film and art reviews I have written in Art History, all the way to my Honors Option research paper that I am working on in sociology about how human nature leads to virtual communities on the internet being formed. I also hope to have a Specialization in Design so I would like a Design page to show different projects I have worked on or experimented on to show my creative side, even if I end up pursuing a job more on the User research side of UX careers, I think it will be useful to have. Also I hope to get involved with as many web-building internships as possible, my Aunt who is a partner in a string of Radiology clinics has already asked for my help and I have also talked to Liza Potts about potentially working with some nonprofits in Minneapolis (where I'm from) so I think it is an extremely good idea to include samples of sites I have worked on for future employers to see. Finally, I think a Home, Contact Me and Resume pages are essential to have, but I would like to keep them relatively basic and to the point, or a viewer might feel a bit overwhelmed with so much information on the site and I generally like more minimalist site designs anyway. It was my goal to make a site map that I could grow into, I'm only a freshman so there is still a lot more work to be done, so hopefully by listing potential project topics, I wont have to change much in the future.
